Making History

Historical perspective of being the first African-American House Page to serve in the U.S. House of Representatives in the 20th century.

Interview recorded August 6, 2008

I wanted to become a Page. The fact that it was history-making didn't really affect me. Because you don't feel or sense history while it's being made. You're just going through the motions of living your life. I mean, and the perspective of what I did and when I did it really is only something I've thought about from a deep historical context in the last few years.
